Nick Brandt's ravishing portraits of African animals are like premonitory memorials, taken to aid the cause of staving off extinction. In Inherit the Dust, his astonishing panoramas of those portraits - installed as life-size panels in industrial and urban wastelands that have trampled the animals' habitats - are a jolting combination of beauty, decay, and admonishment.

The result is an eloquent and complex J'accuse, for the people are as victimized by development as the animals are.

The breadth, detail, and incongruity of Brandt's panoramas suggest a collision between Bruegel and an apocalypse in waiting. --Vicki Goldberg, Art Critic, Author

The wasted lands in Inherit The Dust were once golden savannah, sprinkled with acacia trees, where elephants, big cats and rhinos roamed. These now dystopian landscapes - as Nick Brandt's unvarnished, harrowing but stunning work reveals - brings us face to face with a crisis, both social and environmental, demanding the renewal of humanity itself. --Kathryn Bigelow, Film Director, The Hurt Locker

The images in Inherit The Dust are heart-wrenching and important. This tough new series is a call to action if it is not too late and pulls no punches in confronting us with the devastation of their habitat. --Philippe Garner, Co-Chairman, Christies Présentation de l'éditeur

Le photographe Nick Brandt continue de dénoncer la disparition alarmante des animaux sauvages d'Afrique. Dans Inherit the Dust, il installe ses propres portraits d'animaux grandeur nature dans leurs habitats dévastés. Biographie de l'auteur

Nick Brandt (born 1964) was born in Britain and is currently based in Southern California. Brandt cofounded Big Life Foundation in 2010, which helps protect the endangered wildlife inhabiting a large area of East Africa.
